Papandreou: KAL Jet Spied

ATHENS—Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou, in a speech to members of his Socialist party, said the "world is now convinced" that the South Korean jetliner shot down by a Soviet fighter last year was spying for the CIA.

Papandreou defended his government's differences with its NATO allies on the airliner incident and on economic sanctions against Poland.

[In Washington, State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said the administration had seen only news accounts of the statement. He added, however, that such a statement "would be outrageous and demonstrate a willful disregard of the facts."]
